

ECM Titanium Quickstart

When you first run ECM Titanium on your PC:

- Plug ECM Titanium Flash drive into a free USB port on your PC.
- Locate and install the drivers: the procedure differs slightly depending on the operating system.

Windows Vista or 7

Right after inserting the flash drive with the PC connected to the Internet, the online driver automatic search will start. In the event that the driver is not found, you must enter the driver path “x:\picodisk\driver_titanium” (where “x” is the name given to the device by your PC).

- Once you have made this procedure, the PC will install the drives in a few minutes.
- After the installation is complete, ECM Titanium is launched and you can be operative quickly.

Windows XP with Service Pack 3

Manually select the driver by specifying the following path x:/picodisk/driver_titanium (where “x” is the name given to the device by your PC).

Note: We noted compatibility problems with Windows XP SP3 oriental character operating systems. For this reason we do not guarantee the correct functioning of ECM Titanium on this type of PC.

We recommend that you install on your PC even the ECM Titanium Management Tool software, that among the various features also allows you to launch ECM Titanium without having to use the AutoPlay window or Windows Explorer® every time.

Tool registration

From the first run of ECM Titanium software, and until you don't fill the form, tool registration is required to activate the warranty and the services provided through the Internet. Note: You must provide an active e-mail address in order to validate your registration.
